Driven From Orient By Mailed Fist of Huns for His Pro-Ally Sympathies, Austrian By Naturalization Reveals Secrets of Teuton Intrigues to U. S. and Now on Way to Join Navy

VIRTUALLY driven from the Orient by the mailed fist of Germany because he took pains to impress upon the Chinese that the Teutons were not to be trusted and merely desired to make a catspaw of the republic; narrowly escaping with his life when he left a friendly Englishman's house in Shanghai in the face of Hun rifle bullets, and finally arriving in Honolulu where he was detained by federal officials for investigation-these are some of the experiences of St. Pierre Rudinger, former adviser to the Chinese government and an Austrian by naturalization, who is now on his way to one of the southern states where, he told the local U. S. attorney's office. he will seek to join the United States navy.

Rudinger's stopover in Honolulu, has been veiled with secrecy until torival here a few weeks ago government agents took temporary charge of him at quarantine, and for a greater part of the morning, as well as the Legal Adviser to China early part of the afternoon, he was closeted with Assistant U.
